PREFACE

Welcome to the 71st edition of the American Library Directory, now in its 109th year. The American Library Directory is edited and compiled by Information Today, Inc. of New Providence, New Jersey.

ARRANGEMENT AND COVERAGE

The major section of the directory contains listings of public, academic, government, and specialized libraries in the United States and in Canada. Listings are arranged geographically by the U.S. and Canada, then alphabetized by states, provinces, cities, and finally by the library or organization name.

Each state and province chapter opens with statistical information regarding public libraries. Where feasible, these statistics were supplied by the state or provincial library authorities. Some are derived from public sources.

Entries include the name and address of the library, names of key personnel, and information on the library's holdings. In addition, the entries for the majority of libraries provide information on some or all of these additional areas: Income; Expenditures including salaries; E-Mail; Subject Interests; Special Collections; Automation; and Publications. Also included in each entry is a Standard Address Number (SAN), a unique address identification code used to expedite billing, shipping, and electronic ordering. For SAN assignments or questions, contact SAN@bowker.com. See the sample entry on page xi for a comprehensive guide to information that can be included in each entry.

Each library was provided its data to update via an e-mail and web data interchange application. If an update was not returned, the data were verified, as much as possible, through telephone outreach, direct e-mail, and web research. Entries verified from public sources are indicated by an asterisk (*) following the library name.

Non-listed libraries that have come to our attention since the previous edition are provided with questionnaires. If the library returns sufficient information, it is included. Entries new to the directory are indicated by a section icon (§) to the left of the classification letter that precedes the entry.

Each library listed is identified by a code that indicates the type of library it is. The following codes are used:

- A — Armed Forces
- C — College or University
- E — Electronic
- G — Government, from local to federal
- J — Community College
- L — Law
- M — Medical
- P — Public and State Libraries
- R — Religious
- S — Special, including industry and company libraries as well as libraries serving associations, clubs, foundations, institutes, and societies.

ADDITIONAL SECTIONS

Library Award Recipients 2017. This section includes awards for outstanding librarianship or services, major development grants, and research projects.

Volume 2 of the directory provides auxiliary information to the Library industry, and includes a variety of specialized information:

1. Networks, Consortia, and Other Cooperative Library Organizations includes automation networks, statewide networking systems, book processing and purchasing centers, and other specialized cooperating organizations. Entries indicate the number of members and the primary functions of each.
2. Library Schools and Training Courses includes a variety of college and university library and information science programs. Entries include entrance requirements, tuition, type of training, degrees and hours offered, and special courses offered. A dagger icon (†) indicates a program accredited by the American Library Association Committee on Accreditation.
3. Library Systems provides a listing of all state and provincial library systems as provided directly by those authorities. A brief statement indicating system functions within the state or province precedes the alphabetically arranged list of the state or province's systems. Cities are also included so that the user can locate a system's entry in the Library Section of the directory, or in cases where the state is followed by (N), in the Network Section of the directory.

4. Libraries for the Blind and Physically Handicapped provides a listing of all libraries designated by the National Library Service for the Blind and Physically Handicapped as regional and sub-regional libraries serving print handicapped patrons. It also includes other specialty libraries and those with a significant amount of specialized equipment and services in these areas.

5. Libraries Serving the Deaf and Hearing Impaired provides a similar listing of all libraries that have a significant commitment to patrons who are deaf or hearing impaired as evidenced by the specialized equipment and services they have available. The list is arranged by state and then by library name. The city is included so the user can find the entry in the Library Section and determine the specialized services by reading the paragraph "Special Services for the Deaf" included in the library's entry.

6. State and Provincial Public Library Agencies indicates name, address, person-in-charge, and telephone number of the state agency that is responsible for public libraries.

7. State School Library Agencies indicates the same information for the state agency that is responsible for elementary and high school library programs.

8. The Interlibrary Loan Code for the United States is reprinted with the kind permission of the American Library Association.

9. The Organization Index provides an alphabetical listing of all libraries, schools, and networks.

10. The Personnel Index is an alphabetical listing of individuals who are included within entries for libraries, consortia, and library schools. Entries include name, title, organization, location, and page number reference.

RELATED SERVICES

American Library Directory is also available online at www.americanlibrarydirectory.com. You can search and identify all libraries that meet certain specialty criteria such as legal, medical, religious, etc. You can also search by geographic criteria, vendors, holdings, staff size, expenditures, income, and more with a single search. We invite you to visit the site and take advantage of our free trial offer.

The editors and researchers have made every effort to include all material submitted as accurately and completely as possible within the confines of format and scope. However, the publishers do not assume and hereby disclaim any liability to any party for any loss or damage caused by errors or omissions in the American Library Directory whether such errors and omissions resulted from negligence, accident, or any other cause. In the event of a publication error, the sole responsibility of the publisher will be the entry of corrected information in succeeding editions.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The editors wish to thank all of those who responded to our requests for information; without their efforts, the American Library Directory could not be published.

The editors also wish to express their appreciation for the cooperation of the officers of the state, regional, and provincial libraries who have provided statistics and other information concerning libraries in their jurisdictions.

LIBRARY COUNTS

Provided here are totals for major types of libraries in the United States and Canada. Included are counts for public, academic, armed forces, government, and special libraries. Excluded from the counts are branch, departmental, and divisional libraries not listed with a full address in the directory. Some categories, such as academic, provide sub-totals for specialized libraries such as law or medical libraries. As counts for only certain types of special libraries are given, these subcategories may not add up to the total count for each type of library.

PUBLIC—Each public library is counted once and then each branch is counted separately. Because the organization of systems varies from state to state, the method of counting these libraries varies also. In some cases, the libraries forming the systems were designated as member libraries, while in others they were given as branch libraries. In yet other instances, systems maintain branches as well as member libraries. If listed in this directory as a branch, the library was recorded in the branch count; however, member libraries were counted independently and recorded in the number of public libraries. Special public libraries are also included in the Total Special Libraries count.

ACADEMIC—The figure for academic libraries includes all libraries listed in the directory as part of academic institutions, whether they are main, departmental, or special. Specialized libraries and departments at these institutions, such as law, medical, religious, or science libraries, are also counted in the Total Special Libraries figure.

GOVERNMENT and ARMED FORCES—Counts include all government and armed forces-related libraries listed in the directory, including specialized ones. Those libraries that are also defined as special libraries are included in the Total Special Libraries figure.

SPECIAL—The special libraries count includes only specialized libraries that are not public, academic, armed forces, or government entities. The Total Special Libraries count includes all law, medical, religious, business, and other special libraries found in the American Library Directory regardless of who operates them.
